Appendix A. Accepted current names of agaricoid and boletoid fungi of Russia

This list includes 6142 scientific names of agaricoid and boletoid fungi that were unambiguously ascribed to 3246 accepted current names, using API querying to Index Fungorum (as of 18.05.2021). The checklist is presented in alphabetical order. Each accepted current species name is accompanied by a list of homotypic synonyms, including type intraspecific taxa without current names (denoted by  $\equiv$ ), and heterotypic synonyms (denoted by =), if these have been used in the publications listed below. In order to retain the information about the name, under which the accepted species was published in a particular work, we use the same superscripts for each title and bibliographic citation.

For each current name, the regions in which it has been recorded are listed alphabetically. For each region, the publications in which the species has been published are listed in chronological order. In cases where it was possible to assign the names to specific administrative regions due to lack of information in the publication, geographical regions have been retained in the original manner. For names with problematic taxonomy or nomenclature, we provide comments.

Weinmann established the name Agaricus spectabilis as terricolous fungus (Weinmann, 1824) with note “Proximus Agarico Vahlil Fries Syst. mycol. 1 p. 240.” (= Phaeolepiota aurea in modern interpretation). Fries (1828) cited Agaricus spectabilis with note “In pratis circa Petropoli [terricolous], aut. Weinmann (v.s.)”. Also, he mentioned “variety b” that is lignicolous: “ad radices Quercus”. Apparently, Smith (1949) made a new combination Gymnopilus spectabilis (Fr.) A.H. Sm., based on Agaricus spectabilis Fr. (Fries, 1828). There are two opinions on identity of the species sensu Smith — Holec (2005) consider it as an independent species, Thorn et al. (2020) following Knudsen and Vesterholt (2012), consider Gymnopilus spectabilis (Fr.) A.H. Sm. as a synonym of Gymnopilus junonius (Fr.) P.D. Orton.
